

Middle English Texts and History:
Regional Dynamism and the Creation of National Identity in Romance, Fabliaux, and the Chronicle

A Dissertation Presented to
The Faculty of the English and American Literature
The Graduate School of Arts, Rikkyo University

In Partial Fulfillment of the Requirements for the Degree
Doctor of Philosophy

by
Hiroki Okamoto

April 2015

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	iii
Introduction	1
CHAPTER ONE:
“Wassail, Sax, England”: the Founding of England in the Brut Chronicles
1. A Signal of the Saxon Invasion	16
2. The “Sax” and “Saxon” Treachery	24
3. From the Saxon to the English	30
CHAPTER TWO:
The Rewriting of Nationhood and Ethnic Harmony in Havelok the Dane
1. The Story of Havelok	37
2. The Danish Otherness	43
3. “Here” and “Ferd”: Critique of English Nationalism	46
4. “Wassail” at Grimsby	55
CHAPTER THREE:
Trojan Ancestry and Territory in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight
1. Troy, Aeneas, Gawain	65
2. Gawain’s Treachery on the Bed	69
3. “Here” and “Pis Londe”: Territory in Britain	74
4. Richard II and Regionalism	82
CHAPTER FOUR:
The Reeve’s Tale and Regional/Marginal Identity
1. The “Strange” North of England	87
2. The Reeve’s Tale and the Northern Dialect	91
3. The North through a Norfolk Teller	108
4. Chaucer’s Marginal Otherness	115
Conclusion	127
Notes	133
Works Cited	154

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, I would like to express my profound gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Kiyooki Kikuchi of Rikkyo University, who first planted the seed of my fascination with medieval English literature as well as with the theme of national identity in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight. His mentorship, support, and encouragement over the years have been absolutely invaluable, without which the completion of this dissertation would not have been possible. I am also indebted to Dr. Yoshihiro Yoshino of Rikkyo University, who has given me inspiring suggestions from multiple points of view. His extraordinary vitality and willingness to engage in any kind of academic conversation and discussion have given me a model of scholarship that is unparalleled. Next, I wish to thank Dr. Robert Allen Rouse of the University of British Columbia for providing a detailed commentary on the earlier draft of the thesis, and to Dr. Anna Wallace for reading an earlier draft and giving me valuable advice. My heartfelt thanks also go to my colleagues at Bunka-Gakuin, Makiko Tachibana and Jim Henderson, for sharing with me a buoyant time of English teaching and conversation on English poetry and language that motivated me to improve my language skills. I am also grateful to the PhD candidates and graduate students majoring in medieval English literature and language at Rikkyo University for sharing my excitement about these studies during my doctoral years. Last but not the least, my deepest gratitude goes to my parents and brother: without their understanding and support, I would not have been able to complete this dissertation or to enjoy my doctoral course in this fortunate and favourable environment.

The present thesis contains materials which were previously published in the following papers: “Wassail and History in the Middle English Romance Havelok the Dane,” Studies in Medieval English Language and Literature 29 (2014): 51-68. “Gawain’s Treachery on the Bed: Trojan Ancestry and Territory in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight,” Studies in English Literature 56 (2015): 19-37.